De Luynes 2037; Starr, group IIc, no.52-62 var; Seltman no.445-452 var; BMC 40 var; Gulbenkian 515 var; Jameson 2080 var; Svoronos, pl.8, 8-17 var). Two dies flaws on the obverse and a test-cut on the reverse, otherwise of nice style, very fine and extremely rare. £120000-150000

The test-cut: The test-cut displaces the metal but there is no loss to the original weight of the coin. A large number of hoard Tetradrachms found in hoards from outside the Greek have world test-cuts that were applied by traders in places where the coins were treated solely as bullion; as, for example, from finds from Egypt and the Near East. It is not certain if Athens, after the law of Nicophon of 375/4 BC, was also required to have suspect owls tested by the Dokimastai (testers) in the Athenian market place and in Piraeus that good ones, even if imitations, had to be accepted, while counterfeits had to be withdrawn from circulation. This law was enacted because there were a lot of worn coins and also imitations from Egypt or the Near East in circulation, some of them being now suspected by scholars to be official Athenian issues. It is possible that the Dokimastai were testing the coins by the weight and/or sound of the coins. The Athenian coins were not the only ones to bear test-cuts. The same phenomenon is observed with the coinage of Philip II, Alexander III, the Thassian Tetradrachms, the Sinope Drachms etc.

Comments on the Athenian Decadrachms

Scholars have suggested several different dates for and explanations of why the Athenian Decadrachms were struck.

Some associated the issue with the distribution of ten Drachmas to every Athenian citizen, as Herodotos (7.144.1) reports (C. Seltman, Greek Coins, London 1955, p.94), before the Persian Wars. Others dated the issue to 479 BC (see E. Babelon, Traité II, col. 770), and considered it to be a commemorative issue after the victory over the Persians and the battles of Salamis and Plataiai in 480 and 479 BC respectively. These propositions have been withdrawn based on the classical style of the known Decadrachms. The hypothesis of B. V. Head, who considered the Decadrachms not to be currency but ceremonial issues struck by Kings or Tyrants for their personal gratification, is also unacceptable because the pieces have been found in monetary hoards, and thus, their monetary value is justified.

Yet other scholars have related the issue to the victory over the Persians at the Eurymedon River circa 467 BC and the spoils reported from the battle. This theory is no longer accepted because analysis of some of the Decadrachms has shown that the metal used came from the mints of Laurion and not specifically from the battle (see H. Nicolet-Pierre, "Autour du décadrachme athenien conservé à Paris" in Studies in Greek Numismatics in memory of Martin Jessop Price, London 1998, pp.293-299). Nor can we link the issue to the capture of Thasos and her mines in 465/4 BC because Plutarch (Life of Kimon, 14) and Thucydies (I. 100ff) say explicitly that the mines were gold mines.

Recent research, after die sequence studies and the analysis of hoards, has proposed a date of circa 465 BC (Starr Athenian Coinage, 480-449 BC, Oxford 1970, and Kraay pp.66-68).

The decision to put such a big denomination into circulation is not surprising. Before the Athenian issues, large denominations, such as Dodecadrachms and Octodrachms, were struck in the northern Greece regions specifically for foreign trade. The Decadrachms would certainly have been an important declaration of Athenian political and economic superiority at this period. After the Persian Wars, though not solely as a consequence of them, Athens was the supreme power in Greece. At the formation of the Delian League in 477 BC (an offensive and defensive alliance of Greek city-states against the Persians), it was decided to have Athens as leader. Aristides the Just fixed the sum of the tribute or the number of ships that every member should contribute. The treasury and the centre of the League was on Delos, but in 454 BC the Athenians decided to transfer the treasury to Athens. The documentary sources tell us that the treasury amounted to 5000 Talents (or 7,500,000 Tetradrachms). Athens was criticised by her allies for using a large part of the Delian League treasury for various Athenian construction projects: for the embellishment of their city, especially the Acropolis which houses the Parthenon, the Long Walls (connecting Piraeus to Athens), and the walls at Isthmos. The Persian hostilities ended with the peace of Callias, circa 450 BC, but the tribute did not end for the Allies. We can consider that after 454 BC the alliance became an Empire, the Athenian one, and that this was the principle cause of the Peloponnesian War (431-404 BC).

New archaeological evidence has caused us to reconsider the issue of the production of the Decadrachms; it is our hypothesis that it was not a single issue, but that they were produced over at least 30 or even 40 years beyond between circa 465 BC and about the beginning of the Peloponnesian War. This comes from the evidence of the increasing number of dies, the hoards and the sequence of die-links. 12 Decadrachms issued from 11 obverse and 11 reverse dies are published by Starr for this issue. This number of dies has increased considerably in recent years. But that was expected, because the number of dies and the number of coins known by Starr suggested that we did not know the total number of dies for this coinage (GF Carter, "A simplified Method for calculating the original Number of Dies from Die Link Statistics" ANS Museum Notes 28, 1983, pp.195-206). This increased number of dies, and the fact that we have observed a certain stylistic development, is proof that the issue of Decadrachms is not commemorative and that it was produced in different issues at different periods. We believe that the large number of dies does not mean a very large production of coins. The dies were used to produce fewer coins than for the other issues because they broke sooner than those of the Tetradrachms or smaller denominations. As Starr points out "the die-cutters had difficulty in making durable dies of such a large size, for there are more die flaws…" (p.32). It is certain that dies yet to be discovered will prove the different issues and the chronological range of this coinage.

In our studies, we have remarked upon a certain stylistic evolution on the series of Decadrachms that Starr published. This observation caused us to carry out a stylistic comparison of the Starr Decadrachms with the Tetradrachms that Svoronos reproduced in his plates. It can be seen that the Starr Decadrachms are similar to the Tetradrachms illustrated on plates 8-11, a date range from 475-429 BC.

The Decadrachm we are studying here looks stylistically very similar to the Tetradrachms of Svoronos on plate 10, no.8 or plate 11, no.7, dated from the age of Pericles to 431 BC or from the beginning of the Peloponnesian War to 429 BC. If we make the same comparison with the Starr Tetradrachms, we find a certain similarity with pl. XVIII, 180 and 182, which are part of group V dated at the last half of the 450s. The Decadrachm from the Triton X auction (lot 230), was certainly issued at the same date as the coin offered here because of the shared reverse dies. After stylistic comparison, we found that it is similar to the Svoronos Tetradrachm on plate 10, no.16, dated during the Pericles period up to 431 BC, the beginning of the Peloponnesian War.

The stylistic features to which we gave attention, and contributed to a late date for the Decadrachm, are the shape of three olive leaves on the helmet, the small opening lips (early issues have full smiling lips with limited modelling on the cheek) and the asymmetrical lentoid eye, composed of two lines with unequal curves, a shape that Starr classifies in his Tetradrachms of Group III. The design of the reverse must result from the wider space to fill. The owl is standing facing with outstretched wings and there is no moon. The features that lead us to a late date are the incuse square, which is not very deep and the surface of the reverse which is relatively shallow. We believe that technical reasons can be found for the reduced depth of the incuse square, seen in this Decadrachm and the one sold recently in New York, Triton X: it is probable that this feature made striking easier and that, as a result, the dies were not so easily broken.

It seems that the production of the Decadrachms finished with the Peloponnesian War (431-404 BC) and that they were not struck again during the 4th century. A state would be very unlikely to strike coins of such a denomination simply for prestige and they must therefore have had a practical, economic purpose. The first issues, dated around 465 BC, made up the payments for maritime construction (ship building etc.) and the pursuit of the war against the Persians, of which the last hostilities were around 450 BC. We believe that most of the issues had to be struck after 454 BC, the date of the transfer of the Delian League treasure to Athens and this date is parallel to the bulk of the Tetradrachm production. The construction of the Acropolis demanded large State expenditure, for example the necessity of wood for the construction, the best found in Lebanon, and, more especially, the extraction of marble. This also could explain the issues of Decadrachms for trade in the Near East, regions where, after the hoards, most of the known Decadrachms are found.

The last issue of the Decadrachms could also be Athens's attempt to reaffirm her declining authority over her allies and her citizens. Athens had a similar attitude with the Athenian decree which forced the use of Athenian coins, measures and weights on all the allies of the Delian League. The decree, first dated by the scholars at circa 450 BC, is now dated, after the discovery of more fragments, to 425-421 BC. Some scholars are even beginning to think that it could be dated at 420-414 BC. It is probable that the decree was not really applied by the allies, but as Chris Howgego (Ancient History from Coins, London 1995, p.46) wrote: "…The symbolic element is clear… One wonders whether the Athenians were trying to demonstrate their power to their allies or to themselves", during the Peloponnesian War and especially after the disastrous expedition of Athens to Sicily and Syracuse in 415-413 BC. After that date the metal resources of Athens were diminished and declined to such a level that they were obliged to strike the exceptional issue of gold coins in 407/6 BC (having obtained 14 Talents of gold from the seven gold statues of the Athenian Acropolis), for the payment of important expenses, and the bronze plated coins, of which one is offered in this auction lot number 24. Aristophanes, in his play The Frogs, on stage in 405 BC, makes an allusion to those gold and plated coins in the verses 717-733 telling that now they use, instead of the old familiar coins, coins of bronze and of new gold.

So, to conclude, the coin that we are offering here was struck during the Periclean period, circa 435/430 BC and could thus be one of the latest issues of the Athenian Decadrachms used to pay the expenses of the Athenian constructions or even a part of the preparations of the Peloponnesian War.

913 was the year when Babur successfully laid siege to the city of Qandahar and came away laden with so much booty that the money and specie was divided up by weight rather than counted. In his book Zahir-uddin Muhammad Babur, Aman ur Rahman states that "some specimens are known where the mint name is illegible but clearly dated '933'. The current cataloguer believes that the date was wrongly inscribed and should be read as "913." The coins Aman refers to are very different in style to the present coin and the 933 on them is so clear that one wonders how it could possibly have been an error. This particular coin, therefore, is of particular importance as having the date 913 clearly inscribed.

1. The highest bidder for each lot shall be the buyer thereof. In the event of any dispute the auctioneer shall have absolute discretion to determine the dispute and the disputed lot may well be re-offered for sale.

2. The auctioneer will have absolute discretion to divide any lot, to combine any two or more lots, or to withdraw any lots from the sale without giving any reason. The bidding shall be regulated at the absolute discretion of the auctioneer. The auctioneer has the right to refuse any bid or bids.

3. All lots are offered for sale subject to any reserve price that may be imposed by the seller.

Information for New Bidders

Admission to the auction and participation is free once you have a copy of this catalogue.

You are encouraged to view the lots before the sale and attend the auction in person. Viewing of the lots may be done at your leisure, by appointment, in the week prior to the auction.

The catalogue is printed with estimates alongside each lot. This is intended as a price guide for interested bidders. Although it is our opinion of the value of the lot, bidders should be clear in their own minds what each lot is worth and should be prepared for prices to rise if there is competition for the lot. All lots can realise hammer prices both above and below the printed pre-sale estimate. In normal circumstances, each lot is reserved at 80% of the lower estimate and bids below this are very unlikely to be accepted.

Bidding may be carried out by you in person or by a representative of your choice (please ask a member of Baldwin's staff for more information on this). To collect your bidding number visit the registration table outside the auction room. Please ensure that you arrive in plenty of time for the lots you are interested in. A time guide is printed at the front of this catalogue and aproximately 200 lots are sold per hour. However, bidders are reminded that this is a guide only and Baldwin's cannot be held responsible if you miss your lot.

Alternatively, bids may be submitted by filling out the bidsheet found in this catalogue. They must be submitted in writing either by post, email or fax to the Baldwin offices to arrive not later than 24 hours prior to the sale. Please include a street address in your email. Bids left by telephone are at the bidder's risk. Baldwin's will accept no responsibility for errors in the execution of bids submitted to a member of staff by telephone. It is recommended that such bids are confirmed in writing immediately.

Baldwin's regret that they are unable to confirm receipt of faxed or emailed bids sent up to 3 days prior to the date of the auction.

Absentee bids left with Baldwin's Auctions are executed by the auctioneer against all other bidders. Participants should supply their highest bid for each lot. Lots will be purchased as cheaply as possible against all competition. Absentee bidders will not be contacted prior to the auction if their top bid has been exceeded. Bidding begins below the low estimate and if yours is the only bid you will win the lot for the opening price no matter what your top bid may be. In the event of identical absentee bids, the earliest received will take priority.

If you are bidding in our auction for the first time, please give us the name of another dealer or auction house that knows you well as a reference. If you are unable to do this, we can only send you your lots after your invoice has been paid in full.

Invoices will be prepared on request during and after the auction. These will indicate the total due to A H Baldwin & Sons Ltd (including postage and insurance costs). Invoices will be sent by Royal Mail to bidders approximately two days after the auction has ended. Baldwin's regret that invoices cannot by sent by email. Full prices realised will be included with each invoice posted and are available on request shortly after the auction.

The price paid by the bidder is the hammer price plus 17.625% buyer's premium (including VAT). Book lots are not subject to VAT. Information for Potential Sellers

We produce quality catalogues which are an expertly researched selling tool for your collection. These can be personalised to create a lasting record.

Our catalogues reach a vast international clientèle which is constantly augmented by our presence at international coin shows including London, New York, Munich, Singapore and Hong Kong. This promises favourable results when we auction your coins.

Our seller commission begins at 15% (+VAT) but may be reduced for items of high value or whole collections. Please ask a member of staff for more details. This is the only charge that applies. We make no charge for photography, storage or insurance and there is no fee for lots that do not sell.

Baldwin's are pleased to offer free verbal valuations of your coins, medals and banknotes and also clear independent guidance for their sale by auction or direct purchase.

At the point of consignment you will receive a signed receipt which details our conditions of sale. You will receive a full listing of your items in the sale and a free copy of the printed catalogue at least three weeks before the sale date.

Payment to sellers takes place between 30 and 45 days after the date of the sale. Consignors are not required to pay any money before the auction as all charges are deducted from the final settlement.
